Cousin Orone and Cleopatra

Cousin Orone McDoolle is one of the most patient men in Betzville and, as he often says, you can never tell what will turn up if you only wait long enough. He is willing to wait almost any length of time for something to turn up, and it is this marvelous patience that makes him so successful as a trainer of wild animals. For eighteen or twenty years he has been waiting for some one to give him a couple of lions or tigers, and as soon as someone does give them to him, he will undoubtedly train them in a wonderful manner. Cousin Orone also says he is willing to wait considerable time for someone to give him any other animal to train, and that he will then show us something, but up to the present no one has given him any animal whatever. So Cousin Orone has been lavishing his wonderful talent on Cleopatra.

Last Wednesday a gentleman of Italian parentage arrived in Betzville with a large, rough-cast bear and a painful, squeaky flute, and after wandering through the streets of our burg, put up for the night at the Betzville hotel, and while sitting on the front porch after supper boasted that his bear was ready and willing to wrestle, catch-as-catch-can, with any living being in Betzville, two shoulders to the ground to be a "down." For awhile no one in the vicinity seemed willing to take the challenge, and it looked as if the bear would bear away the championship of Betzville. But just then Orone McDoolle happened along and, hearing the challenge, said he was willing to enter a wrestler, on the terms given, and that he would put Cleopatra against the bear in any kind of wrestle.

At once all became excitement on our main street, and the crowd gathered, and there was a great deal of conversation, for none of us had known that Cousin Orone had a wrestler by name of Cleopatra. But Orone immediately took off his coat and vest, and then he took off his shirt, and asked Uncle Ashdod Cleot to kindly grab the little black thing that nestled between Orone's shoulders. It seems that Cousin Orone, for many months, has been training a flea, and when not in use the flea nestles right there between Orone's shoulders. A flea is a splendid wrestler.

As soon as Uncle Ashdod had grabbed Cleopatra, Orone took her in his hand, holding her firmly between his thumb and forefinger, and spoke to her as one man to another. He explained what she was to undertake, and we all expected Cleopatra to look upon the huge bear with awe and fear, but she merely turned her eyes to Orone, as if to say, "Whatever you command, it is my pleasure to do."

"The honor of Betzville is in your hands, Cleopatra," said Orone. "Remember the rules: first down wins; two shoulders to the ground constitutes a down. Go, my darling, and may all be well with you!" Then he set Cleopatra on the ground, and she immediately became lost to sight.

The Italian at first seemed inclined to resent the appearance of a champion that he could not see without a microscope, but upon being duly spoken to, he had nothing to do but allow his bear to wrestle with Cleopatra. He therefore spoke to the bear in these words: "Jacka, you fighta da flea! You wrestle da flea! Maka da good fight. Gitta da move on!"

At this the bear stood on his hind legs and prepared to catch-as-catch-can for all he was worth, but Cousin Orone McDoolle merely leaned against one of the hotel porch pillars and waited. He said that Cleopatra was probably maneuvering for an opening. The bear seemed surprised, too, for he had nothing to do but stand with his paws out, awaiting the attack. It must be said for the bear that he was willing to wrestle, but he looked as if he would like to know what he was to wrestle with. Suddenly Uncle Ashdod began scratching himself on the leg, and we knew that Cleopatra was indeed maneuvering for an opening. In a minute the Italian gentleman also scratched himself and we were doubly sure that Cleopatra was on her way.

An instant later the battle became fast and furious. Cleopatra closed with the bear and secured a strangle hold on his ear. She hit him three times, and as he turned to grasp her, she jumped to his nose, bit twice, and slid quickly to the ground. The bear stood on his head, wiped his face with his left paw, and whirled about just as Cleopatra attacked him in the right flank. The bear whirled again, struck himself wildly in the right flank with his left paw, just as Cleopatra took a bite or two out of his right hind foot. The bear danced, and Cleopatra saw her chance and jumped to the middle of his back, bit three times and moved up between his shoulders.

It was an exciting moment with the Italian gentleman shouting on couragements to the bear, and Cousin Orone urging Cleopatra on. The bear stood up and tremulous waves wiggled up and down his back, while Cleopatra hung on and bit eagerly. Cleopatra bit again, and tears stood in the bear's eyes, but he was still game. Cleopatra bit once more and the bear tried to reach her with both forepaws, and failed. Cleopatra bit again, and the bear tried to crawl under the hotel porch, but was headed off by the Italian gentleman. Cleopatra bit four times in quick succession and grasped the bear with all her legs, shaking him to and fro, and with a growl the bear threw himself on his back, and wiggled. Cleopatra had won!

The entire audience crowded up to congratulate Orone, and he received their kind words with becoming meekness. He said the credit all belonged to Cleopatra, and he called to her to come forward and receive her reward of praise, but she remained modestly in the background. Consternation reigned, for it was feared that Cleopatra might have been lost, but half an hour later Cousin Orone hopped up against one of the hotel pillars and began rubbing his back against it vigorously. He then said, for publication, that he was able to announce that Cleopatra was not lost.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for anyone that it fails to cure. Send for full particulars.

J. G. Macdonald, representative of the Snyder Preserve Company, was in our office yesterday to correct an article which appeared in our paper several days ago, copied from the Lexington paper, which stated that some of the Snyder catsup had been seized by the Food authorities, which was all a mistake. It was not Snyder's but a medium grade catsup which is manufactured by the Jersey Packing Company and the T. A. Snyder Preserve Company has no connection whatever with this goods, and we do this in justice to our many friends in Maysville and Mason county, and we hope this explanation will be satisfactory, as the Snyder Brand has always been the standard one and will still continue as such.

FUNERAL SERVICES

Yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock the auditorium of the Third Street Methodist Episcopal Church was filled to its utmost seating capacity by relatives and friends who had assembled to pay their last respects to the insommate body of the late Charles Bridges Pearce, and the large representative gathering was a silent testimonial of the high regard in which the dead Barker was held by his friends and neighbors. The services throughout were of a sweetly, solemn character, and the sermon of Rev. F. W. Harrop was of a particularly high order. The floral offerings were many, very beautiful and elaborate. The body was followed to its last resting place by a large concourse of sorrowing relatives and friends.

The funeral of the late Bert H. Politt took place yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence of his aunt, Mrs. Thomas M. Russell, in East Third street, with services conducted by Rev. Roger L. Clark of the Christian Church and Rev. B. F. Chatbam of the First M. E. Church, South. The large number present attested in a manner the esteem in which the deceased was held by all who knew him. Interment in Maysville Cemetery.

STILL PROVING ITS WORTH

The "Kinney Mac," by its usual promptness in getting there on time, clipped an incipient fire in the bud in short order yesterday at 10:30 a. m., and thereby saved a frame building from total destruction. The fire was located in the dry-cleaning establishment of R. Morris, colored, in Second street extension.

The blaze was caused by a tub of clothing, in which gasoline was used in cleaning, catching fire. The fire ladders used the chemical apparatus and soon extinguished the blaze with little loss. The Fire Department, under the guidance of Chief Hite, is becoming more proficient every day and has proven its worth on each occasion it has been called into action.

The citizens of Lexington have just elected two women, Miss LINDA NEVILLE and Miss MARGARET BROWN, to the Board of Education.

These two women were candidates on the Fusion ticket. Their opponents on the regular Democratic ticket were two prominent educators of the city of Lexington, Prof. M. L. PENROE of the State University and Prof. T. B. MCCARTNEY of Transylvania University.

This indicates somewhat the strength of the desire for women on the Board of Education in Lexington. These women, it will be recollected, were elected by the votes of men, no women in Lexington being allowed the school ballot. They were nominated by men, without any solicitation either from them or from other women, as a measure of party wisdom as well as of principle.

As it happens, a strong effort was made by more than one of the masculine leaders in the Democratic party to have women nominated on that ticket. This was overruled by a small coterie of Democrats opposed to any recognition of women's services. Lexington is the city represented by the Hon. WILLIAM KLAIR, who has in two Legislatures opposed the extension of school suffrage to Kentucky women.

It has been represented that the trial of school suffrage for women in Lexington some years back proved a failure. A flat contradiction of this statement of the politicians did not destroy its currency, though this contradiction was made by those who knew that Lexington was still profiting from the reforms instituted by women on the School Board; who could point to the State-wide reputation of some of the women who then gave their services free to their city; who knew that the suffrage was repealed without a demand from the people, practically without their knowledge, at the behest of a few politicians only.

Does it look as if the people of Lexington had found school suffrage for women a failure, or women on their School Boards a failure, when over the dead bodies, as it were, of those Democratic politicians who opposed the recognition of women in school affairs, they nominate and elect women—who did not seek the offices—to serve upon the School Board? Let the people of the State judge.

The Editor of The Lexington Herald, in an editorial of November 10th entitled "The Local Election," has the following to say on the subject:

"The Democrats made a grievous mistake—and as we believed and so stated at the time it was made, a possibly fatal error—in refusing to nominate women for the Board of Education. They had the opportunity to win to their support the influence of the women of Lexington. They not only did not avail themselves of that opportunity, but permitted their opponents to get the advantage which should have been theirs. The same short-sighted, narrow and unwise policy which led to the repeal of the law giving women the right to vote, and to the defeat of the bill giving to women the right of school suffrage, prevented the Democrats from nominating women for the Board of Education. There could be no more severe rebuke of such policy than the election of the ticket on which two women were nominees in an election in which women had no vote.

"The Democratic party certainly, and probably the schools also, are to be congratulated upon the election of the Republican ticket. It is well for the Democratic party to be relieved of the odium of the charge of using the schools as a political asset. There has been only a modicum of truth in this charge. Yet there has been sufficient truth to create a profound prejudice against the Democratic party which has done it infinite damage and probably hurt the schools. Politics has no place in the Board of Education nor in the public schools; the Democratic managers would have shown much greater wisdom had they recognized this overwhelming public sentiment and agreed to the nomination of a non-partisan Board of Education upon which there would be two Democrats, and two Republicans, and two women.
